Life on the Ledge

In an age in which the Western world continues its decline in allegiance to the Christian tradition, the quest persists for a worldview that attributes meaning to the life and death of the individual.

Dawn of the MidNightDay

The final installment of the image essays in the 'Entropy Trilogy', 1: Sidewinder, 2: Swampism and 3: Dawn of the MidNightDay, which is more of a departure to a more symbolic narrative sequence of images that is a story within a story within a story or a synthetic recognition of emotional effects that are a realm of ideas that correctly interpret that which is seen, the state of things.

SWAMPISM

Why the title 'Swampism'? Based on a short lived & little known Portuguese art movement from the turn of the last century that was mainly literary in output whose aim was to cover all & everything and go beyond the conventional limitations of culture, society, pedagogy and conservative requirements perceived as order, were the main requirements.

Nature study images taken from May to September 2022 at Cape Tribulation Northern Queensland, Hudson New York, Maiden Lake Wisconsin, Patterson & Princeton, New Jersey, New Mexico, Krishnamurti Foundation, Ojai, Hollywood Hills & Palm Springs, California, USA

SIDEWINDER

A project in three mediums

Sidewinder attempts to illustrate our blind spots, the sorrow needing a collective non-divisive creative intelligence to resolve. The Restrictions and reactions in communal habits interacting within distortions throughout a neurotic plethora of hidden conformities are also present in the other two parts that make up this narrative, The Glitch, a 36-line statement in blank verse and the 36-image Assemblage.

SIDEWINDER Guernica a sequel 2021, a sculpture made of three discarded objects, is intended to represent in minimalist form the active ruthlessness that continues in so many mutations throughout contemporary design and construction. Any similarity to a trophy or award statuette is intentional. No comparison is intended with Picasso's Guernica, other than the use of its narrative structure and point of view.

WAR FEVER

Fifty colour images of urban America 1992 – 1994

35mm analogue

In Peter Leiss' current exhibition at the Photographers' Gallery he leaves the back streets of Footscray's 'Romper Stomper' (PG Feb 1992 for the 'Main Street' of the American dream.

These photographs are Peter's abstract and structuralist interpretations of the silent war of American society as it faces a new epoch of decline. His subtle yet nonetheless potent visual interpretations suggest a malice rooted deeply in the psyche of America's recent past and present. To the viewer it begs the question, how this world power, world police force, can offer peace and prosperity to anyone with its own house in such chaotic disorder?

Peter. With no malice or sinister political motive, has a viewpoint of an outsider firmly entrenched on the inside. There are no answers or solutions in his narrative but definite road signs clearly stating – this a dead end street, this is a no through road, this is the end of the road.

This exhibition starts with a cup of coffee and then careens down the vacant streets of a society headed for a future that decidedly looks like having all the ingredients necessary for the building of the neo-Babylon.

This is, 'The Lost Continent', where Bill Bryson would feel at home.

- William Heimerman

Director The Photographers' Gallery

War Fever was exhibited at The Photographers' Gallery in South Yarra Melbourne during March through April 1995 & January through February 2004.

TO THE MINOR

sixty eight digital images from January 2019 to June 2020

TO THE MINOR is a selection of images to source a conscious or more to this point, unconscious view that lies before us, in a minimal sense and the minimal in a local environment, *"the smallest bodies will be composed of infinite particles."

This humor-harmony-image-orientated quest, a schizoid desire, to make order from the disorder, has no end, as the terrain has no end, that identify a melancholic indifference and a lack of detail in a detailed world on the rush. As Tom Sawyer, aka Samuel Clemens, aka Mark Twain wrote, "You can't pray a lie."

Having completed the series at the height of the pandemic, I have selected half dozen images more cheery to the end, not out of hope or optimism, but more as a guide.

85 Diptychs / 170 Digital Images 2014 – 2018

<https://www.blurb.com/b/9908696-urban-diptychs>

Serious Jest could be the alternative title to this exercise although it would exclude the few diptychs that are traditional as in pairing, identical twin, precise ratio & dimension. Others belong more with emphasis to the division between the images, where the fold separates the two. Two-image narrative allows drama, irony, contrast, metaphor or chasm as well as the contemplation of aesthetic value. One solution often creates a problem to something unrelated, or so it seems. As the phrase goes – 'truth is indescribable, that is its error', and yet, vital to the human endeavor. The aesthetics of streets and byways with obligation to form, point to the basic human collective behavioral sublimation. Thinking in images, until a meditation – to measure.
